Your own biography as living art

We invite you to engage with your own biography. Through a 4½-day workshop we draw near to exciting, formative or simply to very good moments in life.

The intention of the new project is to explore the multifaceted artistic ways of dealing with biographic processes. During the 4,5 - day workshops, we will concentrate less on learning new artistic skills, but much more try to lend to personal turning points an expressive form through art.

Therefore, we appreciate the participants of the workshops as actors, who transform fragments of their biography into aesthetic artefacts, with the help of the workshop directors. Therefore, the workshops are designed to offer enough space and time, to get acquainted with the other actors as well as with the artistic media.

The project TURNING POINTS consists of different and as such complete workshops, that take place at different times in different countries and each using different artistic approaches towards biographic turning points. Each workshop ends with a retrospective in situ. The developed biographic and aesthetic materials are collected and newly arranged and restaged in the context of a performative installation in autumn 2013 in Halle (Saale), Germany.

The fundament for the artistic examination with turning points and processes of transformation in the actor's own lives will be narrative impulses, that are derivative of qualitative social research. On the background of a retrospective de-construction of personal biographic experiences, we want to give impulses for new ways of viewing current biographic processes.

Please find the workshops at our homepage and register online!
We're looking forward to you and your story!
